Free Vacation For Boys Over 17

Colonel Ernesto V. Smith, chief of staff, 91st Division, who will command Citizens' Military Training Camps at Del Monte and Fort Winfield Scott, July 26 to Aug. 24, announces receipt of special permission from the war department to enlist Californians who will be 17 years old this year.

Until this special concession was made, many desirable young men of the state were denied the privileges of the 30-day vacation and training which Uncle Sam offers free, because they were too young. But this special dispensation will permit a large number who were disappointed, to enroll if they send in their applications at once.

Colonel Smith announces that arrangements have just been completed with the Radio corporation of America for installation of an elaborate demonstrating and broadcasting station which will include all the latest types of Radiola sets, in charge of T. L. O'Fassett, a member of the Naval Reserve Corps, and a noted Pacific coast radio expert. One of the finest and most complete radio sets the factories can turn out, will be given to the student and camp making the best showing in radio. Training will be given by the Signal Corps of the regular army.

Military authorities urge young men who desire to enjoy this free vacation and training July 26 to Aug. 24 to rush their applications today to Headquarters 91st Division, Presidio of San Francisco. Less than a week remains in which to enroll.
